

5 Tips for Team Training Success with Spear Online

Practices across the globe use Spear Online team meetings and role-based courses to align and empower everyone in the practice team – from the front office to the clinical staff. Set yourself up for practice-wide success with these 5 tips.

Stick to a Schedule

How often and for what length of time you schedule team training sessions depends entirely on the needs of your practice – but once you commit to a schedule, stick to it. If you're just getting started, try adding Spear team meeting videos to your regular staff meeting agendas.

Involve the Team

Empower each team in your practice – whether that's your clinical, front office or hygiene team – to get involved with team training. Invite team members to choose team meeting topics based on where they see opportunities for improvement within the practice.

Coordinate Efforts

Encourage team members to log in to Spear Online and bookmark the role-based courses and team pathways that interest them most. Then, work together to create a practice training schedule that aligns with monthly team meeting topics.

Nurture New Hires

Make sure practice-wide improvements don't fall by the wayside when you experience turnover. Include Practice Essentials courses in your practice onboarding to align new team members with your practice goals and priorities.

Make It Personal

Encourage conversations with your team about their personal and professional development – and how they relate to practice goals. As your team reaches practice-wide milestones, ensure you are discussing how team members are progressing individually as well.
