

Supporting Interactions in a Socially-Distanced or Virtual Environment

Navigate the shift to new teaching environments with this facilitated half-day online training. Build an understanding of what meaningful interactions look like and how to integrate them into any classroom setting.

Participants will:

- Understand that interactions still matter and are more important than ever
- Discover strategies for emotional support, classroom organization, and instructional support that foster high-quality interactions in any setting
- Receive resources and support to transfer learning to teaching practice

Build meaningful relationships, even from a distance. This training helps to ensure teachers learn ways to connect and engage with children in impactful ways, even in socially-distanced or virtual settings.

After training, each participant will be invited to join our CLASS Learning Community where they can continue to dialog with CLASS experts and peers from around the world.
