The percentage of budget allocated to marketing grew across the board this year compared to 2020 and 2019. Throughout this report, you’ll learn about the strategies and tactics marketing professionals are focusing on in the year ahead—many of which include third-party spend to Google or social media channels. This shift, combined with an increased need for branding services as companies pivot to accommodate the changing needs of the world, are major contributors to budget increases.
Websites and Digital Marketing Lead the Way

It shouldn’t come as a surprise that digital marketing and website development have taken the lead as the top areas of marketing spend. However, what we couldn’t have predicted was how COVID-19 fast-tracked the use of digital marketing and websites in industries that are historically slow to modernize. Branding also climbed the ranks this year, jumping from 17% last year to 27% this year. Similarly, marketing and sales collateral saw a significant increase from 6% to 21%. With many companies pivoting their service and product offerings to meet new COVID-era demands, we’re not surprised to see that branding and its activation through collateral are emerging as top priorities.

Top Areas of Marketing Spend

Top Marketing Objectives for 2021

Lead generation continues to be the top marketing objective as we move from 2020 to 2021. Last year, we saw a major push for enhanced marketing and sales alignment in B2B companies, and we’re encouraged to see this trend continue as lead generation and sales conversions top the objectives for marketers. Further in this report, you’ll learn that account-based marketing is a top-trending strategy. For B2B companies with rigorous conversion goals, ABM will be an important strategy.

1. Increasing Sales Leads
2. Converting Leads to Customers
3. Increasing Brand Awareness
4. Producing Thought Leadership
Referrals, Email, and SEO Are Your Go-To Lead Sources

Year after year, referrals emerge as the top source of qualified marketing and sales leads in B2B, which is not surprising since B2B is fueled by networking and interpersonal connection. Professionals are more likely to invest their time and money working with a company if there’s a personal connection. B2B purchases are big investments that require department- or company-wide approval, so it makes sense that personal touches are influential in gaining trust to move forward.

Beyond referrals, email marketing and SEO climbed the ranks as top sources of leads. Email marketing doesn’t surprise us as it’s the most implemented and relied upon tactic of the year, driven by the conditions of the pandemic. Seeing SEO top the charts validates the importance of ongoing website optimization and content creation in 2021.

LinkedIn continues to be the most used social media channel for B2B marketing professionals. Additionally, we were pleased to see that Instagram use increased nearly 30% from last year. This jump demonstrates the growing influence of social media on job candidates, as they’re looking to Instagram for a look inside a potential employer’s culture—something that companies need to get creative with as remote work becomes more commonplace. YouTube also saw a significant jump, increasing by 20%. In a world where Zoom and video conferencing are now the norm, it makes sense that companies who were slow to adopt video marketing now see it as a valuable and easy-to-implement tool.

Paid Social Media Is Coming On Strong

Most respondents reported using paid social media and seeing ROI from it.

- 62% I’ve seen ROI from paid social.
- 33% I don’t use paid social yet.
- 5% I haven’t seen ROI from paid social.

LinkedIn Is the Most Used and Engaging Channel

LinkedIn has introduced many new advertising options in the past few years, specifically designed to drive engagement, open rates, and lead generation. LinkedIn Sponsored Content and LinkedIn InMail are incredibly effective engagement tactics. While other social channels have some advertising options, there’s no other channel focusing on engagement more than LinkedIn.
Marketers Will Reignite ABM in 2021

Account-based marketing is a B2B marketing approach that can be executed in conjunction with traditional marketing, content marketing, “smarketing,” and other methods to identify, communicate with, and eventually secure desired business accounts. ABM has slowly but surely gained traction in the past few years as marketers focus more on their target markets.

Through ABM tools like LinkedIn InMail, which lets you specifically target key accounts and personnel, marketers are bringing back this “old-school” marketing method and modernizing it for the digital age.
