

We are very excited about the new regulations and can't wait to be able to welcome you and our other foreign guests! For now, our understanding of the requirements is as follows:

1. Negative PCR test result within 72 hours prior to travel, from the last flight boarded.
2. Complete vaccination, which must be verified before entering Chile through the Chilean Government to obtain a mobility pass*.
3. Fill out the Travelers Affidavit form online, within 48 hours before arrival in Chile.
4. Medical insurance with a minimum coverage of USD $30,000, which covers any expenses caused by Covid-19.
5. Upon arrival, tourists must get a second PCR test, and then travel directly to a specified place of stay and wait there for their test result. Once a negative result is obtained, they may end the quarantine period.
6. A daily follow-up form will be sent via email by the government over 14 days following entry to the country.

The mobility pass may be obtained here. We strongly suggest starting the verification process 3 weeks-1 month prior to travel as it may take up to that time to receive verification.*

This being said, in the world we live in things can change quickly from day to day, which is why we recommend regularly checking official sources such as:

<https://www.chile.travel/en/traveltochileplan/> or <https://cl.usembassy.gov/u-s-citizen-services/security-and-travel-information/covid-19-information/>

We understand travel planning can be more stressful these days, and we sincerely appreciate the effort you are putting in to stay with us.

If there's anything that isn't clear (some of the information still needs double checking and it isn't 100% clear right now if the PCR tests at the airport are done by the government or if travellers have to coordinate and pay for it themselves.)

But we're getting there!
