

Why It's a Bad Idea to Only Create Content for Your Specific Target Audience

General Goals of Content in SEO & Web Marketing

- Directly Connect Customers
- Build Your Audience
- Form Your Brand's Personality
- Form Your Reputation & Links
- Yes! There is overlap.

But, most content you produce will have a very small base during more than 2 of these.

If you only create content for a hyper-specific, commission-focused audience, you risk:

- Heavy competition w/ other organizations who concentrate on that audience
- Ignoring link opportunities from other, more popular, sites that you will learn from a broader base
- Missing potential customers and influencers outside your current sphere of interest

Instead:

- Build upon your content (lots of your time/effort)
- Distribute broad vs narrow or hyper-specific content efforts
- Establish content channels and promotion efforts that fit the goal and the target audience
- Use the right metrics to measure your progress against these goals
