bibliotheca solutions for COVID-19 and beyond

Today, as much of the world begins reopening, libraries must adapt their facilities, services, and resources in response to the challenges posed by COVID-19.

While no one can predict the future, we expect new behaviors formed during this crisis to persist longer term, perhaps even after we have a coronavirus vaccine. In the future, social distancing, wearing masks, offering self-service, and continually disinfecting surfaces will be considered a fundamental responsibility of public facilities like libraries. As grocery stores, retail giants, and restaurants continue to evolve, they increase user expectations, and create the next "normal" for public spaces.

Forward-thinking libraries are taking advantage of new developments - embracing innovative technology to help protect users, thereby ensuring their library continues its essential service and remains engrained in everyday life. To protect staff safety and user wellbeing, they also increase user convenience and overall satisfaction.

Partnering with bibliotheca allows libraries to respond rapidly to a shifting landscape. We achieve the mission of libraries through technological innovation, with an active road map for physical and digital library experiences. A few features on our roadmap have been accelerated to respond to COVID-19 regulations.

We've designed this document to help libraries apply for grant funds that will enhance their services, and share it with key stakeholders and you to learn how you can safely reopen your doors, comply with social distancing requirements, and increase library presence by employing technology that reduces barriers and enables discovery.

We are on hand to answer any questions you may have, provide guidance on best practices, and build custom quotes for any grant applications you are completing. Please let us know how we can help your library receive the additional funding required to serve your community better during this crisis and beyond.
