Our commitment to safety.

Safety and security

Infinity from Marvin has always been committed to creating quality window and door products. Windows in a home should bring light, fresh air and a view. But, it's important to recognize that window screens are only intended to keep bugs out, not prevent a potential fall. Read WOCD Important Safety Information, available at www.marvin.com/our-products/options/window-control-device.

Operation of the WOCDs

Our Window Opening Control Devices (WOCDs) limit the window's net clear opening to 4" or less when the sash is opened and have a release function allowing the window to fully open. In order to meet the standard, WOCD disengagement takes two independent actions which helps prevent accidental release. Devices will then automatically re-engage once the window is closed and again limit the window opening to 4".

Window safety tip

Properly maintained and used WOCDs may help prevent potential window falls, especially in children under five years of age. Always consult local building codes for requirements about WOCDs, egress, and more to ensure your windows operate within the standards needed for safety.

Meeting the ASTM F2090-17 standard

- Limits net clear opening to 4" or less
- Can be disengaged to maintain existing egress capabilities
- Takes two independent actions to disengage
- Automatically resets when window is closed following release
- Factory-applied and integrated into window design
