Movement-based Learning Leads to Improved Focus and Engagement at GCS

Challenge

Andrea Bell, an academic specialist in Greenville County Schools, explores Walkabouts' efficacy in supporting pre-K to 2nd-grade teachers and students.

When Andrea joined GCS, Walkabouts were available to their 53 pre-K and elementary campuses. Her role was to continue advocating for multiple health and wellness initiatives across the district including integrating movement-based learning opportunities in the classroom and offering professional development for educators.

Solution

Andrea continues to proactively engage new staff to help them understand the benefits of integrating movement with learning. Walkabouts offer math, language arts, and reading content in a teacher-friendly platform. GCS' teachers now have an avenue for addressing many different types of learners.

Walkabouts' ease of use means that within a few clicks, teachers can search for, select, and use a standards-based Walkabout in their classrooms.

Outcome

GCS teachers agree - Walkabouts are effective in both returning instructional time to the classroom and engaging students in a much more focused way.

Walkabouts is an on-demand, online platform that activates elementary math, language arts, and reading curriculum with short, movement-rich lessons for young students.
